“ Was just thinking back in my senior moment and thought I'd take a look online to see where everyone went. Condolences to Mrs. Arso's Family on her passing from the Pinkerton's. I remember her from the sixties when my folks rented the top floor of 344 92nd St. She was always great to us kids. Nine marvelous years. I remember the beautiful christening gown and veil she made for me and my 3foot tall babydoll and the greek dish goobebia with the grape leaves she grew right in the backyard.

“ The "share a memory" section wasn't working...so let's try this here. I only have fond memories of Grandma, but one in particular was when she came to visit us and helped me make my very first piece of clothing. I was big on sewing at the time, and she was obviously the perfect candidate to teach me everything I ever needed to know. It was right around St. Patty's day, and all I had laying around was green fabric coincidentally, so she helped me fashion a green leprechaun vest. I was so proud of that thing, and continued to craft more articles of clothing until I realized I might not be as talented as Grandma... She was so funny the entire trip, always cracking jokes and in high spirits. We were playing cards one night and I tried sitting on the kitchen table. She told me "tables are for glasses, not for a**es." I was maybe around 11 years old at the time so I found that so risqué and hilarious. Even today, that simple quote represents how I remember my grandma so well. Classy and responsible (as to not sit on tables), but always witty and entertaining (hence the entire quote). Hopefully I grow up to be as vibrant and amazing as she was, and still have my marbles all the way until the end :)

“ I have so many fond memories of you Grandma, dating back to early childhood; all the family trips to Florida to visit you and grandpa, Thanksgivings together, McDonalds, the Community Center, the Yacht Club, spending time with you in the Florida room playing cards and watching you knit. You were so very talented with your macramé and ceramic masterpieces. I am so glad you got to meet and know my husband and children and they are so happy to have known you. Harold, Gabriel and Sabrina will miss you as much as I will. I will miss your "lasangee", kibee, and "baklewa". I'll miss the smell of your perfume and the sound of your bangles jingling every time you hugged me. We will all miss you dearly Grandma. Rest in peace, Love, Willie (Adrienne)
