“ I had the pleasure of playing golf with Barbara when she lived in Ponte Vedra, Florida. I loved her spirit and I think of her often. I am sad to know she is gone, but I know she lived a "charmed" life as she used to say.

“The passing of a friend is always difficult. I have had to endure a few more than usual lately. It is hard. It always hurts. Most were at least twenty-years older than myself. Now, I just found the news regarding Barbara. This is no exception. Maybe even harder than most. Primarily, because; she and I, ironically, shared a few things. For one; our birthdays. They are identical. Today, May 6th. We would celebrate with cards, letters, little gifts or telephone calls. Sometimes all of them. This birthday I shall not be celebrating. Today, I deeply miss our mutual kind regards and will in the years to come. We also shared something else rather unique. My father. He was the person who taught her how to fly airplanes so many years ago. She told me that nobody believed a woman had the ability to be a pilot back in those days. My dad was the only man who believed in her abilities as a woman and gave her the opportunity. She said it changed her life forever. Already an adventuresome soul at heart, the accomplishment of achieved flight gave her even more confidence. Thus, allowing her to enjoy unique worldwide experiences that few could ever begin to imagine over a lifetime. I loved her stories, memories and items she would send me regarding my father. Since I have lost most all my immediate family members throughout the years, she was my last connection to that special era of time. Barbara was indeed precious to me. I grieve for her like she was one of my own. In my heart, she was. The only consolation is; Those who go before us are not in our past, but in our future. So, with heartfelt love and great honor, God speed dearest friend. Fly on with those wings-level and keep the nose-up!”

“ It will take some getting used to knowing a good friend and client is no longer around. We worked on interesting projects together (i.e. the brochure which resulted in the sale of her villa Scacco Matto in Costa Smeralda, Sardinia). One could always count on an exciting if not challenging adventure when traveling with Barbara (and those who did know exactly what I mean). Her enthusiasm, camaraderie and interest will be missed.
