“ My uncle Earl had the most memorable laugh. It made you laugh too even if you didn't hear the joke. From I was a child, I remember him coming to check in on his big sister, my mother. He never complained and only smiled when she would take his sun glasses or a piece of his jewelry before he left. I miss him. Rest easy uncle Earl.

“ In this difficult time I'd like to reflect on my the life and legacy Earl leaves behind. Ever jovial, bouncing to music and riding bikes. In 2011 he some how convinced me that getting on bike was and excellent idea. And on that faithful day in the care of an uncle I loved I got to experience a wild side of life. A side full of risk, adventure, fun and freedom. This was the side of Earl rarely shared with outsiders. The Earl that was free, loving and adventurous on the back of his bike. I whole heartedly believe that this is the Earl the afterlife is experiencing. I hope he\'s taking the risk he couldn\'t in life, enjoying ever moment to fullest.
