“ Debi: I met your Mom when I cared for her while you and your family were all attending your Dad's funeral. She was a very sweet lady and had already grown her Angel Wings then. My heart goes out to you and your family for the losses you have all had to endure these last few years. What doesn't break us only makes us stronger. I saw your strength throughout all of the adjustments you have made these last few years and know there were times you just didn't know how much more you could handle on your plate. But you did it and you have to know that your Mother did indeed enjoy her time with you here until the end of her life as we know it on earth. I was told as a child that when someone dies and it rains, the Angels are crying because they are so happy to have another Angel join them in Heaven. It rained continuously from Sunday through Tuesday and I said your Dad and Bonnie are so happy they must be dancing a jig because those Angels know how happy your Dad is to have his Ella back with him. Now is the time to fill yourself with all the beautiful memories and put aside all your hard work to make your Mom comfortable during these last 14 months. You are good people and you are earning your wings too. I know you are hurting and will feel a great void in your life, now it is time for You and Don to know this Journey was hard but together you can make beautiful memories so enjoy the rest of your life!
