Our Hands
By Sandra Lutz Kuehn
July 29, 2016
They held me when I was small
Sometimes for no reason at all.
Now life has took a turn on me
For it's her hand I hold you see.
Letting her know that I am here
Trying my hardest to hold back the tear.
Although her hands are now so weak
Her gentle squeeze lets her speak.
I feel the words I love you
And she knows I love her too.
As I hold her hand to say goodbye
It's hard to watch the minutes go by.
I will hold her hand forever
And her touch will leave me never
Her hand in mine, is perfect and fine.

“ It's been sometime now sense I have seen Mary Lee and I know she had been very sick for along time but now she is in peace with lot's of her family and friends and is smiling down on each of you so it's OK too cry and then go on. It will be 10 years next week for my dad (aunt Mary's brother)and it seems like yesterday but we all must move on and time you will, but it will still hurt but if you love her you will do that for her. May you R.I.P. till we all meet again, cuz. Prayers too all of the family from us here in VA. Love you all Bonnie and Family and Aunt Arbutus.
