“ Mom, I'm missing you so much. I know for a greater part of my life I was a terrible son, and for most of that not like a son at all. You really don't know just how much I regret it. I've cried a million tears since getting the news of your passing and it hurts so much. When I saw you laid out, finally in peace I felt so sad. Now the holidays just passed us, and for the first time in my life the holidays were more sad to me than anything else. I guess in years past I knew you were ok and having the holidays somewhere and hoped you were happy in your world. We all have done and said things to each other that hurt one another along the way. And sometimes it was not even something that was said, but maybe allowing just too much time to pass without saying hello. I regret for allowing so many years pass in my life without having you as a part of it and when I walked into that funeral parlor room I knew that you would never be apart of it again.... and that tore me up and I had so much guilt. But you know what mom. You will always be a part of me. I think of you constantly and wished things would have been different. Merry Christmas to you mom... and may god continue to look over your soul for 2011. I love and miss you terribly. I'm so sorry mom. I honestly am. I love you always, Your Son, Tim
