“ Stacey, You were a good friend. I am sorry to hear of your passing. I am so glad I got to see you in Lancaster, PA in 2007. I am so glad you got to be a mom, and that you are with Jesus now. You were a HUGE influence on my decision to leave Mormonism and become a Christian and I will always love you. Your friend, Stacey Weller

“ Stacey--I know you can't read this but I wish you were here. Everything fell apart after you left and it makes me crazy. I don't think it was so much that you were the glue as much as it is that you left a giant hole among us. I miss you and your loving posts each day. Without you I just ended up wandering away. I think about you all the time even though we were not that close. I guess you just made a huge impression on me. I pray your soul is at rest. You were deprived of your dearest wish to see your daughter grow and it is so unfair. Thank you for your spirit.

“ I recently recieved an e mail from my Dear friend, Jaycee Buddy and Brother Elk, Eddie. I was shocked to read that you lost your Daughter Stacey, How tragic. I knew Stacey when she was a young child and teenager. She was always full of life, always smiling and laughing. My thoughts and prayers are with Ed and Frann, Stacey's Sisters, her husband and daughter and all of her family and friends. May She Rest in the Peace of Christ. Sincerely, Your Dear Friend, Frank

“ Stacey--Thank you for loving and laughing and smiling and teaching and always having a kind word. Thank you for always pushing me to take care of my health. I am trying harder to do what you asked of me each and every day. I still can't believe you are gone. I guess that is why I waited so long to come here and tell you good bye. I just kept hoping there was some kind of mistake or somehow you would just surprise us all and say you had never left. In your way you will never leave the hearts of so many.

“ I am sorry I never had the pleasure of meeting Stacy. She looks like she would light up the room with her smile. My prayers are with the entire family at the time of grief. I am sure she will be your special angel smiling down on all of you. Remember she is with our Lord who will always keep her from pain. May God bless all of you.

“ To the bestest friend ever. We have known each other for many years. You will always be here in my heart. You are an amazing woman and friend. You were taken way to soon. I know that you are in heaven and not in pain and you are surrounding us with all your love from above. You were tested on many levels on many different things but through it all you kept your head high and remained strong. You will be remembered always as a strong willed woman, wonderful mother, and a faithful wife. Lived life with nothing but love and laughter. Lydia is a mini Stacey and she will pass on your heartfelt ways throughout her life. You are truly missed and loved by so many whether you met them in person or not. I love you as my own sister and I always will.

“ My heart goes out to all of Stacey's family at this terrible loss. I know she is already missed by every last one of you, and you are all in my thoughts and prayers. I never had the pleasure of meeting Stacey in person, but that does not diminish the love and respect I had for her. I miss her daily posts, especially updates of her sweet girl, Lydia. While we did not share the same beliefs, we each respected the faith of the other and had some very encouraging discussions about how we both cherished our spirituality and our spiritual families. One of the things we DID share was an annoyance of poor spelling and grammar, and it was always fun to see who would spot it first among a post of a mutual friend. We laughed daily over many things. We also discussed important things and knew the importance of prayer in making any decision. I will miss her kind words, her positive outlook and her great humour. I already miss her daily updates of Lydia Hope and seeing that beautiful little girl growing, laughing, getting upset over something (like having her hair tied up) in the photos Stacey posted many times throughout the day. Stacey was that rare kind of person who touched many without realizing it, just by being so genuinely herself. She will be remembered with much fondness, and after the tears stop flowing, she will also be remembered with a smile. With sincerest sympathy, Barbara Westfall

“ Fred, our family was very sorry to hear of the death of your wife. Only one who has lost a dear spouse can know the tragedy of this loss. I wish I had words to ease the sorrow you and your family must feel. I can only offer the comfort of knowing that Stacey is with our Lord in heaven. And we will all see her again on those golden shores. And what a joyous day that will be.

“ How do you say good by to your sister? I remember the day you were born...I was so excited to see you for the first time, to be allowed to hold you. Even to help with the diapering. You were like a babydoll I wanted to play with. But you grew up and were more interesting than a babydoll. I loved your intensity, your sometimes oddness. Really, who clucks like a chicken just for fun? When you felt something you felt strongly about it. I love that you made it ok to say "I love you" when ending a phone call or Skype session. I could always reach out to you to ask how to spell something, and you always knew hoe. You were better that a dictionary. I will miss you forever-untill we meet again. I know you are with family, and you are in peace. But please, once you begin you new duties as Guardian Angel, spreas some peace our way. I love you.

“ Stacey never failed to make me laugh and appreciate life. She enjoyed the little pleasures in life and she made sure that her friends did too. I wish I could do justice to her wonderful wit, her quirky outlook, her sheer enjoyment and love of life here, but I can't. And all of that was topped off with such a loving, thoughtful, caring, creative personality. Stacey was always there to give a much needed surprise "Someone loves you" gift. I think of Stacey every time I see so many things- questionable urban artwork, funny signs, pickles, Starbucks, sunflowers...She lives on everywhere because she shared herself with us so freely. I will always think of Stacey with great love. She loved so much. I know she's at peace now, but she is so loved and so missed. I'm sending all my love and condolences to Stacey's family and friends, and most especially to her treasured girl, Lydia Hope. There are no words, but my love and prayers are with you all always.

“ I was having a bad day - in an ongoing string of bad days. I had nothing to look forward to and was getting depressed. UPS delivered a surprise package arrived at my office. A five pound bag of my favorite pity candy! I couldn't help but smile! I thought my husband had sent them to me, but it wasn't from him. This cheer-up-candy came from my friend Stacey, complete with a sweet note of hope. The truly amazing part is that I have never met Stacey in "real life". We are online friends who had known each other for over five years at that point. We've become friends through our blogs, emails, and social networking sites. We hadn't ever spoken on the phone - but here was this perfectly timed gift that encouraged me and reminded me that someone cared about me. Someone I had never met knew me well enough to know that I needed a pick-me-up! She had even paid attention over the years of emails and blog entries to know my pity candy (and stealthily acquired my work address to top it off)! Friendship like that is a rare and treasured gift! I never got the chance to meet Stacey in person, but I know we will be reunited one day - and I'll thank her for the perfectly timed gift of peanut m&ms!
