“ My mom was a seamstress. She worked hard and was genuinely a good person. I remember her coming home with Horrible wounds from the job. When her father passed, and broke her a bit much and she never really seemed the same after that. She loved old television shows, she loved watching documentaries about serial killers, and absolutely love cats. I suppose she’s the main reason why I’m a cat person to this day. My mom had her demons, and unfortunately, she was never able to conquer them. I tried to do what I could, but I was unable to help her and over the years, we grew more and more distant. Friends and family members tried as well, but in the end she succumbed, I wish things could’ve been different. It’s hard to look at normal families and not be envious knowing what we all went through. I have started my own family now. And with them, hopefully I can break this cycle and bring a little light to the world. Hopefully with my mom’s passing, she can finally be at peace.
